

Mundanity – Girl on the Bed

3D Projection – Projection Mapped of the MAN on stage in the bed AS he's in the bed.
Weary, he's found a bit more of himself now and needs to vent.

Night time.

THE MAN: Bored.

Please Gods of sleep, we've had a great relationship over the years. Do me a solid and let me just have an hour or two. Yeah?

He closes his eyes.

Nope. I've got to do something. I can't stay here.

The lights hum and brighten. In a flash he 'jumps' out of bed. Similar to the previous scene he jumps out of the bed. This time, much easier. Still a bit of a strain, but easier. He walks out into his imagination. Taking it in.

This will do.

He begins putting up his 'posters'. Like a University student's bedroom, posters are up. Bands, pictures from holiday. Memories. Good.

Good.

There we go, that's brightened things up a bit.

He looks at an image of a girl in his old bed 20 years ago.

I remember you.

What was it? Beautiful, wicked sense of humour and flirting with me. Me.

Then we get back to my house and it's just you and me. All alone. You say, why don't we share your bed? I say, "alright then!".

I get in bed. Close my eyes. Fall asleep. Dickhead.

Hmmm, well, tonight, I'm going to accept that invitation. I'm going to get in that bed and most importantly, I am not going to sleep.

He begins a projection of that night and the beautiful girl. She is in his bed and he moves towards it. All of a sudden the Lights abruptly come on and the projection disappears of her to be replaced by him in the bed. Vacuum Cleaner starts up.

Oh come on!

Must be breakfast. Can't wait for mine. Yum.

The day begins. We see a montage of what goes on in a typical day. It's all very monotonous and clinical. Equipment checks, Cleaning of the stoma, inserting the tube and suction. Medication, tubes change, examinations, physio, repositioning in the bed.
